U.S. SUPPORT ORGANIZATIONS RAISING MONEY FOR SOUTH AFRICAN CAUSES

Introduction

The Information Exchange is a project of the Institute of International Education's South African Programs. One of its purposes is to assist funding agencies or individuals to identify organizations or programs in South Africa to assist, support, or sponsor. Some funders are reluctant to become involved in grant-making overseas, because of the IRS-related complexities surrounding obtaining tax-deductions. One mechanism for dealing with these complexities involves the establishment of a charitable entity in the United States, designated by the Internal Revenue Service as a "501(c)(3)" organization that can, in turn, support programs in South Africa. Such organizations are sometimes referred to as "Friends of ..." organizations because those two words often appear at the beginning of the organization's name.

A number of South African organizations have formed "Friends of" organizations in the United States. The object of this publication is to define the problems of giving to foreign charities in a very general way and then provide a guide to some specific U.S. "Friends of" or support organizations for South Africa-related initiatives--the foundations' purposes, areas of program activity, boards of directors, and other information that might prove useful to a prospective donor.

U.S. Support Organizations

An article published in "Fund Raising Management" (April 1985, pages 58-63) by Bertrand M. Harding, Jr., and J.P. Janetatos answers some of the questions about what foreign charities can do to raise contributions that are deductible for U.S. tax purposes.

Even though the foreign charity may apply for and receive U.S. tax-exempt status from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) in the same manner as U.S. charities, exemption from U.S. income tax alone does not make the foreign charity eligible to receive tax deductible contributions. The U.S. tax law insists that an eligible charitable recipient be incorporated in the United States.

One technique foreign charities organized outside the United States have used to raise U.S. tax-deductible funds is to establish a U.S. support organization, a "Friends of" organization.

It is permissible, under U.S. law, for tax-deductible contributions made to a U.S. charity to be passed on to a charity abroad. A U.S. charity may not, however, act as a "mere conduit;" the contribution to a U.S. charity will not be deductible if it is earmarked by the donor for distribution to a foreign organization, even if the foreign organization is a charity.

A U.S. charity can solicit funds for a designated foreign charity only if the following conditions are met:

- The funds cannot be for general support to the foreign charity, but should be for special projects that meet the definition of "charitable, educational, or scientific;"
- The U.S. charity has full control over the use of funds;
- The U.S. charity checks to make sure that its contributed funds actually are used for charitable purposes (this is sometimes called "expenditure control").

A U.S. charitable organization, then, can receive U.S. tax-deductible contributions and serve as a source of funds for a specific foreign charity if it:

- Identifies certain U.S. individuals who are concerned about the foreign charity (but no legal connection) and will serve as the foundation's board of directors;
- Incorporates and operates under the laws of a state or the District of Columbia;
- Provides in its charter and by-laws that it is organized on a nonprofit basis and operated exclusively for the purpose of raising funds and contributing them to other charities; and
- Vests the power to make all grants and contributions in the discretion of the board of directors.

Those wishing additional information on this subject may write to: Jack Janetatos, Baker & McKenzie, 815 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Suite 1100, Washington, D.C. 20006.

In making the information available in this Working Paper--both about the support-organization mechanism and about the organizations included in this guide--the South African Information Exchange is not necessarily endorsing any specific organization and would expect any potential funder to make its own independent evaluation.

Working Paper Series

This is the sixth in a series of papers published by the Information Exchange (a project of the Institute of International Education's South Africa Programs) in its efforts to collect and disseminate information on existing or potential resources to enhance educational and other opportunities for black South Africans.

Other working papers survey the South Africa-related activities of U.S. foundations, U.S. professional associations, U.S. colleges and universities, U.S. corporations, and U.S.-related corporate trusts operating in South Africa.

The Africa Fund

Mission Statement:

The Africa Fund, the tax-exempt associate of the American Committee on Africa, has been working for freedom and independence in Africa since 1966. The current focus is on South Africa's apartheid policy and on its continuing war against the people of the neighboring countries.

The Africa Fund both aids the victims of the South African regime and educates Americans about the need for a U.S. policy that supports freedom instead of apartheid. It maintains a close working relationship with leaders of the African National Congress, SWAPO of Namibia, and church, labor, and human rights organizations in South and southern Africa in order to respond quickly to changing needs.

Program Areas:

- The Africa Fund and the American Committee on Africa have spearheaded the drive to end U.S. investment in South Africa through sanctions and divestment. This movement has already resulted in Congress's banning all new investment in South Africa and 23 states and over 70 cities have acted to withdraw over $21 billion from corporations that invest in South Africa.
- Its "Unlook Apartheid's Jails" Campaign, with Bill Cosby as the Honorary Chairman, collected and dumped at the South African Embassy and Consulates over 100,000 keys symbolizing the demand to release South African political prisoners. The Africa Fund continually alerts a network of concerned community leaders throughout the United States to new arrests, detentions, bannings, death sentences, and the continuing torture of political prisoners.
- The Africa Fund provides humanitarian assistance to the families of South African political prisoners, and to African refugees in southern Africa and the United States. In particular, it works to provide funds and supplies for refugee centers administered by the African National Congress and SWAPO of Namibia. In the last three years it has sent over $500,000 in aid for refugees and other victims of apartheid.
- It also conducts a wide-ranging educational program on southern Africa and U.S. policy. This includes publications, a telephone hotline for anti-apartheid organizers, an in-house research center, and continuous work with the electronic and print media.

The African Arts Fund, Inc. (AAF)

Mission Statement:

The African Arts Fund, Inc. (AAF) was established in 1985 to assist artists from South Africa to study in the United States. AAF concentrates on those artists who, because of apartheid, have no access to artistic training and are unable to extend their artistic horizons. Apartheid has resulted in the isolation of African artists from the world artistic community. AAF works towards correcting this phenomenon by responding to the needs of African artists for training and exposure abroad.

Program Areas:

AAF offers scholarships and fellowships in all the artistic disciplines: dance, music, writing, drama, fine arts, film, and photography. AAF works closely with cultural community groups in South Africa that are the repositories of a post-apartheid cultural foundation. Applicants are matched with U.S. cultural institutions and colleges. Wherever possible, tuition waivers are obtained and AAF assumes responsibility for living expenses and provides a network of friends and contacts.

Specific Activities:

AAF fellowships have assisted two dancers at the Alvin Ailey School of American Dance; one at Alvin Nikolais/Louis School of Dance and another at Jones-Ludin Dance School in Hawaii; a painter at Hunter College; a dramatist at New York University's Performing Arts Department; and a photographer at Magnum, Inc. The third recipient of the Benjamin Moloise fellowship (a joint venture with the Creative Writing Department at New York University) has just been selected. Two opera singers received a grant to study at the Juilliard School of Music after being selected from 400 applicants from around the world.

AAF organizes fundraisers and solicits donations in order to support these artists.

The Bishop Desmond Tutu Southern African Refugee Scholarship

Mission Statement:

To provide an education to the future leaders of a free southern Africa.

Purpose:

Established by Archbishop Desmond Tutu in 1984, The Bishop Desmond Tutu Southern African Refugee Scholarship Fund works in cooperation with American Colleges and universities to provide education and training to refugees from South Africa and Namibia. More than 30 students are currently enrolled in the program and more than 200 are assisted each year with emergency grants and loans and counselling. A program of the Phelps Stokes Fund, The Bishop Desmond Tutu Southern African Refugee Scholarship Fund is the only privately financed organization in the United States offering scholarships for Southern African refugees.

Committee for Health in South Africa (CHISA)

Mission Statement:

The Committee for Health in South Africa (CHISA) consists of persons in North America who have volunteered their concern with health in southern Africa, and in particular with the health issues raised by apartheid. Prime concerns of CHISA are the health of the deprived majority in South Africa; health rights and related human rights in South Africa; and the role of health professionals and professional organizations in that country. CHISA has a unique status as the U.S. liaison with South Africa's multiracial and anti-apartheid National Medical and Dental Association (NAMDA), as well as with other health professionals in South Africa.

Program Areas:

- To educate the public and the health professions about health and mental health in southern Africa, and in particular about the effects of apartheid and racism on health and mental health;
- To develop a knowledge base about health and health care in southern Africa, and to study the effects of apartheid and racism on health and health care;
- To work towards an improvement of the health of all the peoples of southern Africa;
- To develop an anti-apartheid health network across North America;
- To support in every way possible the activities of the National Medical and Dental Association (NAMDA) and of analogous groups in South Africa.

Get Ahead Foundation/USA

Mission Statement:

Get Ahead Foundation/RSA seeks to promote and develop the business and communal interests of black South Africans. Founded in 1985 by Dr. Ntatho Motlana and Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Get Ahead Foundation/RSA has expanded its programs to 20 black townships nationwide. Its programs fall within two categories: Commercial and Social Services.

Program Areas:

On the Commercial Services side, Get Ahead offers loans to fledgling black business people interested in starting their own business. It also offers business training programs, where it links experienced business people with a Get Ahead borrower. In order to reach more people, Get Ahead has organized classes at several universities. These classes assist the business person in accounting, bookkeeping, and other basic business practices.

On the Social Services side, Get Ahead assists squatter communities with the construction of health clinics and classrooms. It offers legal help to squatter communities dealing with the South African authorities. It also assists in providing toilets and digging boreholes for water. It is dedicated to assisting the poorest of the poor in their struggle for survival.

Grassroots International

Mission Statement:

Grassroots International is an independent, nonprofit social change agency that works in partnership with organizations and individuals in North America, Europe, and the Third World. It currently funds community-based relief and development projects in Africa, Asia, the Middle East, and Latin America, and produces related education and information programs. In South Africa, it works with the United Democratic Front and the Congress of South African Trade Unions to build a movement for a nonracial democracy.

Specific Objectives:

- To support black communities fighting forced relocation; striking workers running cooperatives to feed their families; and other organizing projects.
- To fund development projects in Namibia, Mozambique, and Angola.
- To coordinate an electronic information project that supplies firsthand reports and analysis from southern Africa and other Third World crisis areas to contacts throughout the United States.

Program Areas (1983-1989):

- Paramedic training in black townships;
- Community organizing;
- Training and cooperative development;
- Health and safety training for trade unionists;
- Cooperatives for black women;
- Nonracial school curricula development;
- Leadership training seminars; and
- Support for writer training and organizing.

International Defense and Aid Fund for Southern Africa (IDAF)

Mission Statement:

To defend, aid, and rehabilitate the victims of unjust legislation and oppression and arbitrary procedures; to support their families and dependents; and to keep the conscience of the world alive to the issues at stake.

Program Areas:

IDAF provides legal defense for political prisoners in South Africa and Namibia, and humanitarian aid for their dependents. IDAF also produces a wide range of books, pamphlets, and other materials dealing with apartheid, and provides information and other resources to the press, radio, and TV, the United Nations, Congressional Committees, national and regional church bodies, the International Court of Justice, and other organizations.

Current Activities:

Children in South Africa continue to be detained, tortured, and therefore in urgent need of help, and their defense is of the utmost importance to IDAF. However, because of the appalling increase in the hitherto low number of death sentences for political offenses, its top priority has been widened from children alone to include the alarming number of death sentences pronounced on adults.

Khotso: The South African Exile Fund

Mission Statement:

To provide Americans with a way to support the African National Congress of South Africa (ANC) humanitarian projects for South African exiles in Tanzania and Zambia, with particular emphasis on the Solomon Mahlangu Freedom College (SOMAFCO) and the two South African communities-in-exile in Tanzania. SOMAFCO was established on a 600-acre area donated to the ANC by the Tanzanian Government to provide a home and an education for the hundreds of young people who fled South Africa after the Soweto Uprising of 1976. The school, and two communities that have grown up around it, have about 5,000 residents and are educating about 1,500 students. Working with South Africans inside the country, these South Africans are developing the prototype for education in a post-apartheid South Africa.

Program Areas:

- Solomon Mahlangu Freedom College;
- Ruth First Student Orientation Centre;

Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law
Southern Africa Project

Mission Statement:

To provide funding and legal expertise within South Africa and Namibia for defendants in political trials, and for challenges to repressive laws. To ensure that United States laws designed to pressure the South African government to reform are upheld. To provide information to the American public on the legal and human rights situation in South Africa and Namibia.

Program Areas:

- Provide legal defense for trials in South Africa and Namibia. Litigate courts of the United States on issues relating to South Africa;
- Research, publish, and distribute information on legal and human rights abuses in South Africa and Namibia;
- Educate the American public and pressure the South African Government through nationwide campaigns on such issues as detentions, restrictions, and the death penalty;
- Lobby Congress and the Administration to pass appropriate legislation and to issue clemency appeals. Organize or participate in Congressional hearings.

Open Society Scholars Fund (OSSF)

Mission Statement:

To provide an opportunity for the American university community to support South African black students enrolled in nonracial universities in South Africa.

Program Areas:

Established in 1986 with the leadership of Tufts University President, Jean Mayer, and the New England Board of Higher Education, the OSSF has provided 163 scholarships in the first three years of operation. Nearly 40 American college and university campuses participate in the program at present.

OSSF is operated by the University of Cape Town Fund, Inc., and the Fund's Board reviews and distributes all scholarship monies to the South African universities involved. An American Steering Committee provides guidance to the Fund regarding grant distribution and operation of the program at the South African universities.

Operation Hunger, Inc.

Mission Statement:

Operation Hunger's primary purpose is to raise funds for specific projects to be implemented by Operation Hunger in South Africa. It is also dedicated to making Americans aware of the work that Operation Hunger is doing to relieve hunger, prevent malnutrition, and help people help themselves.

Operation Hunger was started in South Africa in 1980 in response to the need felt by many voluntary organizations for coordinated action on rural hunger and poverty in South Africa. This means South Africa as the map showed it in 1910.

Specific Objectives:

In short term, hunger relief and malnutrition prevention, particularly in the very young and the old; in the long term, the establishment of self-help projects. Operation Hunger does not set up projects in its own name but works, in every instance, through organizations with an established infrastructure and maximum credibility and accountability with the grassroots community.

Program Areas:

Operation Hunger is currently feeding 1,300,000 people daily and has established some 200 development projects including communal and household gardens, brickmaking, diamond mesh wire for fencing, sewing, handicrafts, and beaded jewelry making and the manufacture of small agricultural implements. Operation Hunger is in the process of responding to requests for an additional 287 projects.

St. Barnabas College Fund, Inc.

Mission Statement:

To provide financial and other appropriate support to students at St. Barnabas College, an independent, coeducational, nonracial boarding and day school in Johannesburg. The school provides students with a thorough preparation for university entrance in South Africa and abroad and sets standards in educational practice that will be appropriate in a liberated, democratic South Africa.

Program Areas:

St. Barnabas College's scholarship program enables the school to draw its students primarily from needy homes in oppressed communities.

Southern Africa Education Fund

Mission Statement:

The Southern Africa Education Fund, Inc., is committed to the belief that all southern Africans, regardless of race, must be educated together. Its goal is to prepare leaders to contribute to lasting solutions in a society where fundamental changes must take place.

Program Areas:

Outstanding students are being selected to study in the United States, initially in Georgia, at educational institutions of distinction. The students will enroll in traditional courses of collegiate study and, in addition, will participate in studies of conflict resolution theory and practice, crisis management, and cross-cultural-communication.

The Fund will also conduct special sessions for other southern African students. These will deal with subjects relating to conflict resolution, power sharing and communication, and will usually be conducted during the summer months.

Southern African Advanced Education and Training Project (SAAETP)

Mission Statement:

To help involve American institutions in the development of the SAAETP program: both by providing training and/or work experience placements for appropriately qualified black South Africans; and by mobilising financial resources to support the program.

SAAETP is an independent charity aiming to provide high level training and placement for selected South Africans, who have the potential to become senior managers or administrators. SAAETP sees as its tasks to help increase the number of black South Africans with high level administrative and professional skills so that, as change does take place in that country, there will be available a larger pool of competent and experienced black managers. In this endeavor SAAETP supports candidates from within or from outside the country.

The need for this program relates to the fact that, in South Africa, blacks have been systematically excluded from positions of authority, especially in the public sector; or from gaining the experience that will prepare them to shoulder these responsibilities. This is also true, though to a lesser extent, of the business sector.

The problem, however, is not simply one of training but also relates, crucially, to the need to help candidates gain the practical work experience that is an essential part of the formation of a senior manager. A considerable number of black South Africans, some of them living in exile, have a university education but have no immediate opportunities to use their education, broaden their expertise, or gain practical experience in their chosen disciplines.

Program Areas:

SAAETP believes that it is important to support the process of preparing black South Africans for senior administrative and management positions. SAAETP's primary objective is, therefore, to promote training in the main branches of administration and management. In order to achieve this, SAAETP seeks to:

- Identify candidates with the necessary aptitude, educational background, and/or experience;
- Identify appropriate training courses; or, where necessary, make special arrangements for tailor-made courses;

- Identify industrial and commercial enterprises or public institutions, such as local authorities, willing to grant placements for such candidates in order to provide on-the-job training and management experience; and
- Identify institutions or enterprises willing to provide candidates who have benefited from such training with employment for specific periods.

In March 1989, thirteen SAAETP Fellows had completed their training and a further fifty-one were either on courses or in placement, or were about to be.

Southern African Freedom Through Education Foundation (SAFTE)

Mission Statement:

To increase leadership potential for an independent Namibia and a free South Africa, by providing college scholarships for South African and Namibian students.

Program Areas:

Bantu education serves to deprive the majority populations in South Africa and Namibia of adequate educational opportunity, particularly in technical fields. Southern African Freedom Through Education Foundation works to provide Southern African students with the opportunity to pursue degrees in technical fields at one of California's institutions of higher education.

SAFTE students will enter a community college transfer program, from which they will enroll at a baccalaureate institution. SAFTE seeks support for its goals from all sectors of the community, including churches, labor, and elected officials.

Working in cooperation with the African American Institute and the United Nations Education and Training Programme for Southern Africa, SAFTE brought its first group of students to Laney College in Oakland for Spring semester, 1989. These four individuals include two Namibian women and two South African men, all of whom are refugees who had been residing in the Frontline States.

Tutu Foundation for Development and Relief in Southern Africa

Mission Statement:

The Tutu Foundation for Development and Relief in Southern Africa was established in 1985 to help victims of apartheid-generated economic disintegration and social turmoil in the Republic of South Africa and neighboring countries. The Foundation's general objective is to empower these dispossessed, displaced, and impoverished people. This end is sought by concentrating on self-help projects in southern Africa.

Program Areas:

To support initiatives in community development, construction, relief, rehabilitation, and training or the provision of services in the fields of health, education, agriculture, and resettlement either directly or in conjunction with other international organizations conducting charitable operations in the southern African region.

To prepare educational materials and sponsor lectures, forums, and seminars in this country to increase awareness about the evils of apartheid, especially as manifested in the dispossession, displacement, and impoverishment referred to above.

The United States-South Africa Leader Exchange Program (USSALEP)

Mission Statement:

The United States-South Africa Leader Exchange Program, Inc. (USSALEP), founded in 1958, is a multiracial association of concerned Americans and South Africans dedicated to the promotion of a just society, through peaceful means, brought about by transforming human relationships and fostering human dignity in both countries. To this end, USSALEP seeks, within and between the South African and American societies, to foster productive communications at the leadership level and assist in the development of leadership in all sectors of society. Above all, USSALEP perceives its role as that of a catalyst--fostering the creative interaction of individuals and organizations sharing its concerns and goals.

USSALEP is privately initiated and incorporated in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as a charitable educational association. It is tax-exempt under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, and contributions are deductible for U.S. income tax purposes. USSALEP is funded by private sector contributions and grants. It has no affiliation with any government and receives no government support.

Program Areas:

USSALEP's major programs include executive, community, and grassroots leadership training of black South Africans in areas of journalism, law, business, and academia, and individual exchanges of persons in leadership roles. Further, USSALEP conducts symposia and seminars on policy issues of importance within South Africa in order to promote communication between South Africans and Americans on issues of mutual concern. USSALEP also promotes resource sharing and institution building. This results in a multiplier effect that strengthens new grassroots initiatives and broadens the outreach of well-established community institutions. In 1989, it sponsored the following activities:

- Journalism Programs:
Training Program for black South African journalists;
Nieman Fellowship at Harvard.
- Other Professional Training Programs:
Johns Hopkins University SAIS Teaching Fellowship;
Trial Advocacy Skills Training Program;
CDP Executive Leadership Business Study Visit to the United States;
Community Leader Training Program.
- Exchanges:
Congressional Aides' Team visit to South Africa;
Individual Leader Exchanges between South Africa and the United States;
Alan Pifer Travel Fellowship.

- New Program Research and Development:
Community Health Programs;
Employee Stock Ownership Plan (ESOP) Initiatives.
- Other:
Conferences and Symposia;
USSALEP-originated publications.

United States-Zululand Educational Foundation Inc.

Mission Statement:

The United States-Zululand Educational Foundation has been a registered 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization since its founding in 1984. It is dedicated to three goals: improving the level of higher education available to black South Africans residing in the provinces of KwaZulu and Natal; strengthening the service infrastructure of a University that educates over 5,000 black, white, "colored," and Indian students each year; and encouraging the exchange of perspectives and personnel between U.S. universities and their faculty and student counterparts in South Africa.

Program Areas:

The University of Zululand is an open and fully-integrated institution servicing a geographic area that encompasses nearly 30 percent of all black children enrolled in South Africa's primary and secondary schools. In addition to its heavy emphasis on teacher training, the University maintains the largest rural/community outreach program in all of South Africa. This latter activity currently provides agricultural, economic, legal, and health care assistance to some 30,000 of the country's poorest and most vulnerable population.

Trustees:

The trustees who do voluntary work on behalf of the U.S.-Zululand Foundation firmly believe that South Africa can make a peaceful transition to a future in which social justice, political rights, and economic opportunity are available to all. They see higher education as the key to this transition. They also believe that it is the so-called "black universities" that will provide most of the professionals necessary to ensure that this new South Africa is both viable and democratic.
